

Legal Obligations for Home Schooling in Oregon

During the 1999 legislative session, the Oregon Legislature revised statutes pertaining to home school (ORS 329.465, 339.030, 339.035, 339.250, 339.460, and 345.505). New Oregon Administrative Rules were passed in May 2000 and require home schoolers, age 7 (on September 1) to 18 to:

1. Provide a one-time written notification of your intent to home school to the Education Service District (ESD) that contains the school district of which your child is a resident. If you move to another ESD, the new ESD must be notified in writing as well.

Your letter stating your intention to home school must be received by the ESD at least ten calendar days prior to the first day of school for your local school district. If the student is taken out of school after the school year has started, the letter of intent is to be submitted within ten days from the time the student was withdrawn. In either case, the letter must provide the ESD with:

1. The child's and parent's name, address, phone number (optional), and e-mail address (optional)
 2. Child's date of birth
 3. The name of the school the child is presently attending, or last attended, or if the child has not attended school, the name of the public school district in which the child resides.
2. Test at grades 3, 5, 8, and 10. Testing for these grades is to occur in the third, fifth, eighth, and tenth year ending August 15. The first year is defined as when the child is seven on September 1, or earlier at the parent's discretion. The following table illustrates how the new rule is to be applied.

Age on September 1

9 years old	grade 3
11 years old	grade 5
14 years old	grade 8
16 years old	grade 10

In many cases a student might be a year older when they test depending upon the date they were born. For example, a third grader born November 20 will be 10 if they take the test in May. The key question remains, how old was the child on September 1st.

Some home schoolers who do not have children in the above grade levels may wonder if they should still have their children tested. Our position here at Basic Skills has always been that parents should test for their own information first, and secondly in order to comply with state law.

Achievement testing helps:

- to determine if the curricula being used is working
- identify academic strengths and weaknesses
- provide proof of the progress their children are making
- establish a beginning or ending academic benchmark
- aid them in preparing their child for the achievement test that is legally required

3. Turn test results into ESD at grades 3, 5, 8, 10 upon request.

The new law does not require home schoolers to turn in test results unless the ESD specifically requests them. Blanket requests in some counties may take place.
